

The Life Insurance policies are created against events related to an individual's life, body intactness and health – different disabilities, loss of ability to perform job duties, death. And since these are nonmaterial losses, which cannot be measured in monetary amounts, one person has the right to own more than one such policy. This means that for one insurance event, for example a motor vehicle accident, if you have a Life Insurance policy, you can receive two separate compensations – from the “Civil Responsibility” insurer of the driver at fault and from your insurer. The same is valid when there are two Life Insurance policies. Such policies can have saving, reimbursement or mixed value. Regarding the specifics of each type, we can assist you in case problems with the insurer arise.
